This month the Iowa Soybean Association (ISA) will move into its new office building in Ankeny, located next to the DMACC campus in the Prairie Trail Development. ISA is governed by an elected volunteer board of 21 farmers. We are one of the nation's top progressive and innovative agricultural organizations, serving as a resource for research, education and information for both producers and consumers. ISA invests millions of dollars annually in production research aimed at helping farmers grow soybeans more efficiently and profitably. In addition we are a recognized leader in development and implementation of environmental programs that help farmers to be the best possible stewards of the land, water and air. The association also works to expand markets for soybeans and soybean products. We support the livestock industry, which is the largest end-user of U. S. soybean meal. We also promote the development of new uses for soybeans, such as renewable fuels and healthy soyfoods. In addition we pursue international markets. This year ISA has sent trade missions to China, Hungary and Turkey. Through memberships ISA also deals with state and federal legislative policies.
